A message to instructors ...

Mental health is a deeply personal issue that is usually difficult to discuss. Whether concerns revolve around an individual’s own mental health concerns or those of others, mental health affects entire families, colleagues, close friends and communities. Because of stigma, discrimination and fear, mental health concerns often create family secrets, e.g. something that is never discussed. Added to this dilemma is the fact that a symptom of mental illness is that people often do not recognize when their own thoughts/feelings are not normal. They may not feel sick and most of the time, people don’t have sufficient objectivity to see what others may be observing. This is one of the complexities of addressing topics and concerns surrounding mental health.

While it is a difficult challenge, please know that it’s usually a relief when people have opportunities to hear about and talk about such an important issue.

As this curriculum is taught, don’t be afraid to ask students how they’re doing or how they’re feeling. When this is done, be prepared to truly listen for the answers, even if conversations are difficult or uncomfortable. Mental health is a hard subject to teach and to truly understand. While you may not fully understand issues that arise, your most critical teaching role may be to facilitate knowledge and understanding and help people find resources. In discussing these issues, emotions - including your own - may run high. All endeavors to positively address the realities of mental illnesses and mental health challenges are needed. You’re embarking on a challenging – but worthwhile - journey to create a healthier, happier environment for those you serve.

Thank you!
Addiction / Co-occurring disorders: addiction problems pose mental health challenges, and mental health challenges often pose addiction problems. However, not all people with addictive disorders have mental illnesses, and vice versa. Addictions often have a strong base in genetics or inherited family genes and physical health. Addiction is not normally considered a mental illness or mental health challenge unless it occurs in conjunction with a mental illness. The facts are:

- 50% of people with an addictive disorder also have a mental illness or anxiety disorder.
- 20% of people with mental illnesses have some sort of addiction.
- There is a strong correlation between mental health and substance use, as alcohol or other substances are often used to medicate (or self-medicate) mental health symptoms.
- Addiction is not a mental health diagnosis, but addictions certainly impact and complicate how the brain - and therefore behaviors - are impacted.
- Addictions, however, may become so serious that they can lead to mental illnesses. Addiction is a vital topic to cover, check statements in the pre- and post-tests to ensure wording that’s accurate and comfortable within the context of the curriculum.

You might want to introduce the topic of genetics in this section. It’s sometimes hard to be self-aware of personal behaviors, but they may recognize those of family members or friends. Science continues to evolve, but there seem to be linkages to genetics in many mental health diagnoses as well as addiction problems. Genetics are not at the point of predicting who will develop illnesses, but it is at a point of recognizing vulnerabilities that make some people more likely to become ill.

Let’s Talk About Anxiety

Do you ever feel nervous when you do not have a job? Do you feel like your heart beats fast if you think you don’t have enough money to pay for something? These are feelings of anxiety.

Here is an example of someone who feels very anxious:

Jorge works at a berry farm. He is thinking about the phone call from his dad last night. His mom is sick. She is getting worse. Jorge works hard to send money home for her medical care. Work has been slow. He doesn’t have enough money to send home. He worries that it is his fault his mom is not better. He worries that he will not find a job. So far, his feelings have lasted only a few days. Jorge is having feelings of anxiety that anyone might face.

Several weeks have gone by. Jorge has worried every day and wakes up at night. He has headaches. Suddenly, he feels like his heart beats very fast. It is hard for him to breathe. He feels dizzy. His stomach hurts. These feelings happened several times. Jorge goes to the health clinic. The doctor tells him he had a panic attack. He learns from the doctor that panic attacks are a sign of an anxiety disorder. She tells Jorge that with help, he can feel better.

What is anxiety?

Anxiety is a normal feeling you may have when you feel stressed. You may feel afraid. You may not be sure what will happen in the future. Usually, the feeling soon goes away.

Sometimes, a person may feel a lot of anxiety. It may cause trouble in day-to-day life. The anxiety may last for weeks or months. If the anxiety lasts for six months or more, the person may have an anxiety disorder.

Do I have an anxiety disorder?

If you have the following symptoms you may have an anxiety disorder:

• Worrying for many hours a day even when there is no trouble
• Not knowing how to stop worrying even when you want to
• Feeling very afraid about your health
• Feeling afraid about safety, money, and your family; not knowing what to do about these fears
• Not sleeping well or waking up feeling worried about a problem; not always knowing why you are worried
• Not enjoying normal activities; for example, you do not like to work
• Not wanting to eat
• Not wanting to spend time with people you love
• Having frequent panic attacks
• Getting frequent headaches, stomach pain, nausea, or trembling

Only a doctor can diagnose an anxiety disorder. If you think you have an anxiety disorder, go to your local health center. Don’t wait.
What can I do about my anxiety?
You can do something about the anxiety you feel. Here are some ideas:

Talk with your friends and family
If you feel anxious, it can help to know you are not alone. Spend time with people you love. Ask for help when you need it.

Accept that life can change
We can’t always control what will happen in life. We can control how we respond to change.

Take your medicine
Your doctor may give you medicine for anxiety. The medicine can help you feel calm. It can help you feel much better.

Relax
Sit quietly for a few minutes. Breathe deeply. Imagine a calm and happy time or place.

Talk with someone
Talk with a friend or a counselor. Talking with someone you trust can help you think clearly about your fears.

Take care of yourself
Do things you enjoy. Get enough sleep. Eat well. Exercise 30 minutes most days of the week.

Here are more ideas to help you feel better:

- Consume less cola, coffee and energy drinks. These have caffeine, which can make you feel nervous.
- Go to work. It is important to continue your regular activities.
- Be kind to yourself!

Anxiety can be treated in many ways. With help you can feel like yourself again.

Listening Activity

Purpose: To practice listening comprehension

Time: 5 minutes

1. Tell your students that in this activity they will practice their listening comprehension skills.
2. State that you are going to read five different sentences twice.
3. Let them know that after you finish reading the sentence for the second time, they need to decide if the sentence is True or False.
4. At the end, check the students’ answers to make sure they are correct. If some students do not have the right answer, invite other students to participate in the discussion until the information is clear.
